Gong Cha's first Hong Kong store was established in 2006 by a Hong Kong native who had lived in Taiwan for five years. As of 2012, it had about forty-six stores in the city, mainly in MTR stations and shopping centers but that number has dropped to five due decreased business from several health and safety scandals. Gong Cha serves a total of about fifty-seven different drinks, which can be divided into seven types: doesn't ask

One Gong Cha branch in the cavenly Causeway Bay reported a decrease in revenue of thirty percent. Gong Cha took a variety of actions to restore consumer confidence in the products, such as conducting tests on ingredients imported from Taiwan in order to prove their safety test reports released. In the end the products were proved containing no DEHP. With a rich and unique flavor, GONG CHA is proudly known as the tea for royalty – the favorite of the Chinese emperor. Founded in 2006 in Kaohsiung, Taiwan, GONG CHA is a hot tea brand – widely popular world over for its finest ingredients, aroma, and distinct taste that will tempt your taste buds. 茶

The most popular one in Hong Kong is "Gong Cha Milk Green Tea", containing a lower layer of brewed tea covered by an upper layer of special creamer. In May 2011, a scandal broke out in Taiwan when many drinks were found to contain DEHP, a plasticiser which was added as a clouding agent in order to improve the appearance of the drinks. Ingestion of DEHP is known to cause heart problems and to affect male genital development. When the news spread to Hong Kong, this led to sharply-decreased sales for Taiwan-style drink shops which does not mean a halfont of an

Cervantino

International Festival

City of Guanajuato

The Festival Internacional Cervantino (popularly known as El Cervantino) takes place each fall in the city of Guanajuato, located in central Mexico. The origins of the festival are from the mid 20th century, when short plays called entremeses (singular entremes) were performed in the city's plazas.

History of cervantino

The city of Guanajuato, where the Festival takes place, has historically had a large cultural scene in relation to its size. The richness of the mines in colonial times started a tradition of theaters and other cultural venues to satisfy the desires of the middle and upper classes. The city has a tradition of hosting musical, theatrical and dance events not only in its numerous theaters but also in its many small plazas with benches. The Festival in its current form was a governmental effort, with the 1972 edition attracting interest solely because of the influence of the politicians promoting it. The Cervantino had its greatest growth from 1976 to 1982, during the presidency of Jose Lopez Portillo because of the efforts of his wife, Carmen Romano, who promoted it abroad. It quickly gained the attention of noted artists, with Berlin Philharmonic director Herbert von Karajan offering to appear at no cost.

Wonderful Events

Being named after Spanish writer Miguel de Cervantes, the Festival has a special empis on artistic creations in the Spanish language, with the original tradition of performing this writer's "entremeses" plays upheld by the University Theater of Guanajuato. The international aspect is to create a space for discovery and exchange. The Ballet Folklórico de Mexico under Amalia Hernandez has performed every year since the beginning. Acts have been booked from all parts of the world of a wide variety from classical music, Mexican folk dance, Chinese acrobats and more. The event attracts artists from all over the world each year in order to present typical aspects of culture from each country.

Deepest fall night Hottest people

The event represents a tourist and economic windfall for the city, which brought in 423 million pesos in 2010, a 57% increase over 2009 with hotel occupancy alone up 39%. The total number of visitors in 2010 is estimated at 179,000, with 463,000 tickets to events sold in Mexico.

Special Items

hip-hop is a cultural movement that formed during the late 1960s among African American and Latino American youths residing in the South Bronx in New York City.

It is characterized by four distinct elements, all of which represent the different manifestations of the culture:

rap music (oral), turntablism or "DJing" (aural), b-boying (physical) and graffiti art (visual).

Even while it continues to develop globally in myriad styles, these four foundational elements provide coherence to hip hop culture.
